If this is not the case this can easily be remedied with a couple of refresher lessons to get up to speed with the required skill sets before beginning the course.

The course begins with a 1 hour lesson to assess level of competence, followed by the course theory component. Theory classes can be up to 9 people however the maximum for on road Practical component is groups of 3 people. These Practical sessions are then scheduled into blocks of time to maximise learning and efficiency and co-ordinate with flexibility each individuals busy life schedules.

The course is competency based and completion of the course does not automatically mean a pass as there is a minimum criteria and a series of manouevres that must be completed in order for competence to be achieved. This is why the student must be competent in the RR Gearbox before the course starts as there is no time during the course to go over gearbox fundamentals.

Please Consider

When figuring out which company you want to train you in Heavy Vehicle operation, understand that you can go out there and borrow a truck or even get lessons in a "body truck"

When you throw your resume on the heap to compete with other people applying for the same job, you have a much better chance with one of our specification sheets (See over page) in your resume explaining what you have been trained in, than the alternative... and besides we will match or better the price of our competitors every time. That's our guarantee to you, our valued client.
